05/26/2016 05:12am	Hi, I just wanted to comment on recent changes to the cafe. I purchased a Rocky Road from the cafe today and asked if it had gone down in price given that they had shrunk to about half their previous size. The cafe staff said that they had changed suppliers and the traybakes were all now £1.20. Aside from the fact that a 35p increase is a substantial jump, I really don't think this can be justified given that you're paying for half the amount of food and in my opinion they taste considerably worse than the previous traybakes. If possible, could the prices either be reduced, the portions increased, the cakes made nicer or could we go back to the previous supplier. Quite a few people I know have commented on the deterioration of the cafe in recent weeks and I think it's a shame given that the Fitz cafe is generally so nice.	The cakes haven't halved in size. We have been trying different suppliers and have now settled on a good supplier. They are priced accordingly
